City, it taking an active interest in the water supply for this city, and writes to a Salt Lake friend, under date of Dec. i, he says: "It may not have gone quite as far as the original Commercial club plan, but it's along the same lines, so far as it does go, and those other features can be taken up at some time in the future if neces sary. I am particularly anxious that this should go through now because our greater work under the national rrigation law naturally has connection with this movement. If there is anything more that I can do I wish you would advise me; also as to the situa-tion in regard to the Utah lake proposition. If you have a copy of the contract under the Water Users' assoclation. I wish you would mail me one here and such other matter as you think would interest me. I will probably going to Washington within 10 days and if there is anything there that you want me to look after please

Col. Holmes is particularly interested because of his proposed improvenent on the Eighteenth ward square, here he would like to erect a great errace of apartment houses to cost hearly a million; but until some definite understanding is arrived at the matter of a water supply, he hardy feels like laying out so large a sum of money.

Interesting Testimony in the Selling-Liquor-to-Indians Case.

At a trial in which Indian braves from the Uintah reservation were the principal witnesses, Joseph Hicks was yesterday found guilty in the United States court of selling liquor to the Indlans. Arguments in the case were concluded at 5 o'clock, at which time the grand jury retired to find a verdict. In three hours it returned, with a finding of guilty and a recommendation of Hicks was tried under an indictment from the grand jury, charging him with selling two bottles of liquor to two Indians named Quinanch and Ned, wards of the government, and in charge of the United States Indian agent at White Rocks, Both Indians swore that he did sell them the whisky, and he, in defense, claimed that it was tak-en away from him forcibly by them. The trial was replete with incidents throwing interesting side lights on reservation life, and on the "strip," the little stretch of "no man's land," that runs a dozen yards wide, along the edge of the reservation because of a discrepancy in two surveys, which fail to bring official boundaries together. The testimony of the defense yesterday was aimed at breaking down the reputation for truth and veracity of the Indian witnesses. On the stand In-dians swore that the reputation of Ned and Quinanch for truth and veracity was poorer than that of most Indians, and white men swore that it was better than that of most white men. An Indian testified that he had been put in jail in Salt Lake, not because he was overfull of firewater, but because he refused to shake hands with another Indian witness, with whom he had car-ried on an old feud, and against whom he carried a grudge.

Mr. Miller, an acting Indian agent, testified that he had received instrucions from his superior to run down the iquor selling business, and locate the men engaged in it. Accordingly on Thanksgiving day, 1903, among the merrymakers who went down to the strip to join the hard-breathed revelry went two Indian braves with money in their pockets, and police uniforms on their backs, both furnished by Uncle Sam, the money to be invested in "booze" and duly and truly reported to the agent to be kept as testimony against the seller. A true and official report was made that night. But next morning when two Indian braves had been sufficiently sobered up they turned over two bot-tles, and confessed that although they appeared to be full of whisky, they were in reality full of water, and whis-key mixed, and that on the way home with the exhibits, they had indulged to the extent of half a bottle each, and hidden the evidence of the theft by replacing it with water. They named Hicks as the man they secured the whisky from, and this resulted in the filing of the suit.

The trial of Robert Reynolds, a companion of Hicks in the affair, was begun this morning, and it is expected that it will be concluded by tonight.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

JOSEPHINE WOOLLEY, ELIZABETH BADGER.

Interesting Address by Rev. Dr. Paden To School Children.

Yesterday afternoon the principals of the city schools were addressed by Rev. William Paden of the First Congregational church on the subject of kindness and humane work in the school. He dealt with the causes of cruelty, and the ways in which school children can help in overcoming them. He spoke in part as follows:

"Many animals are ill used because their masters do not know how to give them proper care. A horse or dog may be real ill and almost unable to work, without the owner being aware of its cendition. It is cruelty to keep an ani-mal in the harness when it is suffering, and children should be taught how to know when a beast is unwell. Persons with irritable dispositions are much inclined to vent their ill temper and rage on their poor animals.

"In some schools the principals meet once a month in an organized body to care for birds and animals and receive instructions in regard to dumb crea-tures. This, to my mind, is not so well as having the teacher instill humane principles into the pupils every day as the occasion affords. It should be made a part of the daily work and not a formal periodic task. The children will then become imbibed with humane ideas and learn much about the care of the little brothers of the earth and

At the conclusion of the lecture humane literature was distributed to Next Wednesday the principals will be addressed by Charles Gilbert, associ-ate editor of "Stepping Stones to Lit-erature." He will pass through Utah on that date, en route to California. HEART FLUTTERING.
